About the programme

The Joint Master in Global Economic Governance and Public Affairs (GEGPA) is offered by CIFE in Berlin and Nice and the School of Government at LUISS Guido Carli in Rome. The Master focuses on how to assess, manage and enhance private and public institutions' governance with a wide range of economic and digital intelligence tools. It also seeks to sharpen students' analytical skills and strengthen their negotiation capabilities to enhance their future careers as policy-makers.

The Master is taught by renowned researchers and experienced professionals who combine second to none practical expertise and academic credentials. It combines on-site teaching, case studies, consulting missions, research thesis, and online learning tools.

Become a member of a distinguished group of young students from a wide range of national and cultural backgrounds who strive to expand their professional opportunities.

Learn how governance is a game changer in today's global economy.

Overview of the academic year

- TERM 1
October
to January
- The programme starts in Rome, on the campus of LUISS School of Government. Courses will give an introduction to Global Governance, focusing on the context and challenges of economic governance and policy in the 21st century.
- TERM 2
February
to April
- The programme continues in Berlin, in the CIFE premises. Teaching will be concentrating on new forms of trans-national and interregional governance as a way forward towards Sustainable Development in the context of major climate and demographic changes.
- TERM 3
April
to June
- Courses conclude in Nice, in CIFE's main premises. A special focus will be laid on Policy Intelligence, inciting participants to investigate how far the digital society enables transforming economic data into policy knowledge. As part of their academic requirements, students will complete a final master thesis.
- Joint Master in Global Economic Governance and Public Affairs

Graduates are encouraged to apply for an internship. This facilitates their entry into the job market and allows them to benefit from a network of national and international government officials, private sector representatives and leading academics. GEGPA graduates have the possibility to apply for an exclusive internship with one of CIFE's contributing partners such as the OECD in Paris or the UNCCD in Bonn.

About the academic institutions

CIFE, European Institute is based in Nice, with offices in Berlin, Brussels and Istanbul. It is one of the six institutions of excellence to receive an operating grant from the European Union under the “Jean Monnet Activities” of the Erasmus+ programme. It offers currently seven Master programmes in European integration, international relations, economic governance, energy transition, and climate diplomacy. All CIFE programmes are interdisciplinary with a strong job-oriented component, offering thus high-level academic education at the crossroads of theory and practice.

School of Government

The School of Government is part of Libera Università Internazionale degli Studi Sociali (LUISS) Guido Carli, a multidisciplinary university offering degrees at all academic levels. The focus lies on business studies, economics, politics and law. The campus is located in the centre of Rome and presents a modern study environment for 7000 students. Since its founding, LUISS has played a key role in Italy's economic and cultural development.

Giulia Belardo Italy, GEGPA 2018/19

Being in contact with many different cultures is something I have always cherished and my year as a student at LUISS and CIFE gave me the opportunity not only to live in three different countries, but also to be surrounded by students of many different nationalities. I really appreciated the Master as it is not only academic, but also lays a lot of value on professional expertise from many different sectors. This year was definitely very valuable in preparing me for the EU Bubble in Brussels, where after being a trainee at the European Commission, I now continue to work on EU relations from the NGO perspective. My year at CIFE was a truly bridge-creating and door-opening experience.

Everything you study is useful and is directly related to current events: Climate change, sustainability, energy policy, big data, cyber governance, digital economy, different forms of governance, adapting governance to meet the needs of a global civilisation. The teachers are the best part of the programme.

They are primarily practitioners who bring the wisdom and experience they have acquired in their own work to the classroom. You will be taught by very impressive people from the UN and other notable institutions. And of course the traveling is spectacular. Rome, Berlin, and Nice are some of the most amazing cities I've ever been to. Living in three different countries, one after the other, is pretty fantastic. My GEGPA experience impressed the leadership in my municipal government and I believe really caught their interest so that I was happy to find my dream job short after graduating.

For more than 60 years the Centre international de formation européenne has been promoting the values of Europe, European integration and governance, multilingualism and student mobility through its European and international higher education programmes. As CIFE President I am pleased to be able to contribute to the next stage in the development of this academic institution.
